BY NEW AGREEMENT

Germany, Italy and Japan
Conclude Tri-Partite Consultative Pact

SUGGEST A 'NEW ORDER'

Will Have To Deal With
250,000,000 People,
Claims Ribbentrop

By Pierre J. Huss
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—With the implied warning that the United States will feel the concentrated power of 250,000-000 people if she intervenes in the European war or the Far East, the Reich today announced conclusion of a tripartite consultative pact linking Germany, Italy and Japan.

Under terms of the agreement, Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop announced, Germany and Italy recognize Japan's leadership in expanding and creating a "new order" in the Far East.

In return, the announcement said, Japan sanctions and approves the search by Germany and Italy for increased "living space" in Europe.

Any power not engaged in hostilities at present which seeks to intervene in the affairs of or attack any partner in the history-making agreement will "have to deal with the concentrated power of 250,000,000 people," Ribbentrop said.

Should such aggression occur, the three powers will co-operate on a

$500,000 Inheritance Award
Made By A Phila. Judge

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—An award of the inheritance of $500,000 by Miss Nancy Wharton Fisher Lennig,
Andalusia, has been made by Judge
Charles Sinker, in Orphans Court, here.

Miss Lennig was entitled to receive the half million inheritance upon reaching her 21st birthday anniversary
last June.

Miss Lennig, daughter of Rufus King Lennig, Andalusia, inherited the fund from her maternal grandfather,
Lawrence Johnson, who died in 1905.
Two weeks after reaching 21 she transferred her share in the Johnson estate to the Pennsylvania Company and Lawrence J. Morris as trustees, to pay her the income and, upon her demand, to pay her up to $100,000 of the principal of the trust for her use.

TOWNSHIP GROUP PLEASED WITH READING SYSTEM

Ass't County Sup't Charles
Boehm Considers Method
At P. T. A. Meeting

PICTURES ALSO VIEWED

The new reading system inaugurated
in Bristol Township public schools, grades one to six, was discussed at length last evening by Charles Boehm, assistant county superintendent, upon the occasion of the first meeting for the term of the Laurel Bend Parent-Teacher Association.

Bristol Township is one of three districts in the county which have instituted the new reading program.
Through this reading system, a new method of report card markings is being carried out, students' ability being gauged mainly on the reading. It was pointed out by the speaker that there are no group promotions in the lower grades by this method, also no failures. Each pupil progresses on his merit.

Japanese Press Issues
Warning

Tokyo, Sept. 27.—The controlled press
of Tokyo warned today that a "frontal clash" between essential interests of Japan and the United States is becoming inevitable.

Assailing the "hostile meddling" of the United States even as Japanese officialdom sought to minimize the anti-American aspect of the tripartite agreement signed in Berlin, Tokyo newspapers bluntly told Washington
to keep hands off Japanese affairs.

Japanese officials were openly indignant over the embargo on export of scrap iron to this country decreed by President Roosevelt yesterday, declaring that Japan's policy of expansion to the south is "immutable" despite American opposition.

But it was left to the press to express in outspoken form the present state of the Japanese mind.

Results of Political Campaigns

(By "The Stroller")
A little Bristol girl, starting to school this term, informed her family a few days ago that the students could not salute the American flag "because we have no flag."
"You wouldn't know the words
if they said them," countered her older sister.
"Yes, I would," replied the six year old, as she solemnly took her place in the middle of the floor, saluted, and started: "I pledge allegiance to the United States of America, and to the Republicans
for which it stands. . . ."

It is anticipated that if the mission work and membership warrants, a congregation will be formed.

SET UP DISTRICTS
FOR DRAFT BOARDS

Bucks Officials Will Operate
In Four Sub-Divisions
In County

NAME MEMBERS LATER

For the purpose of setting up local draft boards to handle the work of con-scripting men into the army after they have registered on October 16, the entire state has been divided.

The division is based on population,
so that the board has under its supervision a district in which there are more than 30,000 persons.

Local boards are not to be confused with the registration boards. Registration boards will be comprised of a regular election board and will operate only on October 16th, to list the names of all men of draft age, from 21 to and including 35.

The local draft boards will operate later, when the actual drawing of names for conscription will begin under the "selective system."

Names of registered persons that are drawn will be forwarded to their respective local boards, and the local boards will notify and examine all persons summoned for service. After the "candidate" appears before the local board and is approved his next step will be into the army, unless he is granted exemption or is rejected.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Captain Elliott

Washington, Sept. 26.
EXCEPT that the third-term-
ers seem disposed to parade
it, and Mrs. Roosevelt, who is taking an increasing part in the third-term campaign, mentions it in her column, it is likely the securing of a captaincy for himself in the Army Air Corps Specialists Reserve by Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President,
might have gotten by without adverse comment—though it rather seems to invite it.

BUT the publicity of this event
was somewhat overdone and it was inevitable that certain things should be said. The fact is, they should be said even though it again brings down upon the head of the sayer the dreadful accusation that he is making a dastardly attack upon the President's family. The first and most obvious thing, of course, to say is that Elliott could not have secured a captaincy in any such way and with any such speed but for the fact that his father is in the White House. Here is a man well within the draft age, utterly lacking in any sort of military training, experience or special equipment,
who simply makes an application
and immediately is made a captain in the army, assigned, at his own request, to the "procurement" service.

THE President's eldest son, James Roosevelt, the big insurance and moving-picture man, holds a captain's commission in the United States Marines, and Franklin, Jr., is an ensign in the United States Navy. The latter, it is fair to state, did take the R. O. T. C. training course at Harvard and thus qualified in a regular way to hold a commission. But that is not true of either Elliott or James. Neither

Phone Cables in River
Are Nearly Completed

After three months' work the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. has laid a submarine cable paralleling the Calhoun street bridge, from the Jersey
to the Pennsylvania shore.

The cable is described by telephone engineers as a new type by which several contacts are carried on the same wires. Because of its delicate nature, special protection is required to prevent outside interference and engineers discovered that submarine placements resulted in improved performance. Hence the new line was laid in the river bed instead of on the bridge.

Work of burying the cable is near completion. Crews operating from a series of sand-bag dams worked through the summer in laying the line and are now finishing the job of bedding down the cable under silt and rock to prevent a carry-away in fresh-ets and floods.

Cables on the bridge have not been removed, but it is understood these, too, will eventually be transferred to the river bottom in a later project.

HISTORICAL NOTE:

The Rubicon was a small stream of ancient Italy which marked the boundary of Cisalpine Gaul. On one side and the other the country was much the same, the rolling Italian land. But in the year 49 B. C., on one side of the Rubicon lay the continuance of Roman constitutional government; on the other, Caesarism. The crossing of the small stream seemed physically of little account, but in the end it closed the era of republican Rome.

Within a year, the Sullan law which prohibited re-election of a Consul until 10 years had elapsed since his previous Consulship, was abrogated, and Caesar was given the right to seek the office for five years in succession. In 46 he was made dictator for 10 years, though Roman law provided that dictators must lay down their office in six months. In 44 Caesar was made dictator for life. And Caesar's heir succeeded to the principate.

Caesar had broken with the Roman tradition, and had declined to become a private citizen when his term of office expired. His defense, and the only defense which could be advanced, was that Rome needed a master.

Traditions are like the little stream in Northern Italy. On one side or the other the prospect may appear the same, but the appearance is deceptive. Once the Rubicon is passed, there is no turning back, but only the continuous breaking of new and untried paths.
Where they led once-republican Rome is a matter of history.

There are many Rubicons, as many as a nation has traditions.
One will lie before the American people next November.

BUCKS CO. WOMAN
IS SENTENCED; TOTS
KILLED BY HER CAR

Mrs. Greta Zollikofer, Ivyland, Pleads Guilty To Manslaughter

COMMENDED ON PLEA

Sister and Brother Were Victims When Hit By Her Machine in February

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—Commended by the judge for her plea of "guilty," Mrs. Greta Zollikofer, Ivy-land, Bucks county, driver of the car which on February 23rd snuffed out
the lives of two children in this city, was sentenced yesterday to a three months prison term, as the result of the tragedy.

The sentence imposed on the 28-year-old woman by Judge Louis E. Levin-thal, here, was commented upon by him thus: "It seems altogether futile to talk in terms of imprisonment, because this lady is not a criminal—and yet two young lives were snuffed out as the result of her gross careles-ness. . . ." he adding that he realized the "special circumstances" in the case. It was pointed out that Mrs.
Zollikofer might have secured her freedom had she chosen to stand trial.
The sentence followed her plea of guilty to involuntary manslaughter
and aggravated assault and battery.

The two children who were killed when struck by the Zollikofer car as they crossed Allegheny avenue at Jasper street, last February, were Barbara Bieling, 7, and her brother, Donald, 6.

Concert Memberships Are Far Beyond Expectations

First group reports for the Bristol
Co-operative Concert Association, received last evening at the concert headquarters on Radcliffe street, showed that over 300 memberships have been secured.

Of this number approximately two-thirds are adult memberships, with the balance being students.

Two free season tickets were presented as prizes last evening, the recipients being Miss Jean Roberts and Mrs. Donald Moyer.

Officials of the Bristol Association
state that indications point to securing of the General Platoff Don Cossack Chorus, for one of the concerts. Nicholas Kostroff is conductor of this fine group of musicians.

"The memberships are definitely beyond expectations" it was announced today, "and many more memberships are anticipated." It is stated that if any man enrolling for the concert series, is drafted for army service, money will be refunded. Sale of memberships closes at five o'clock tomorrow evening.

VITAL IMPORTS

Political developments in the Far East and military developments in Europe have drawn attention to this country's dependence on foreign sources for its supply of two raw materials, both of them indispensable for a wide variety of purposes in American industry—tin and rubber.

Principal tin ore producing countries are the British Malaya, The Netherlands, India, Bolivia and Siam. About 98 per cent of U. S. rubber imports comes from the Far East. Both tin and rubber are controlled by cartels or international agreements, but in such topsy-turvy times as these, cartels are bits of paper, blown by the breeze.

So far, there has been slight worry about any disturbance of the steady flow of pig tin into America, especially since Bolivia alone, it has been ascertained, could supply 60 per cent of this country's tin requirements.

But rubber is quite another story, although encouragement on this score is found in a story from Washington that, in the event of the shutting off of the supply from abroad, the United States, by reclaiming and synthesis, could make itself independent of all the rest of the world in satisfaction of the many industrial needs for this essential material.

The cost of plant construction for such a gigantic enterprise will, of course, run into hundreds of millions of dollars. But some who claim to be in the know assert it will be well worth it.

NOT REALLY LAST BILLION

It had to come sooner or later. The United States Treasury is down to its last billion. It's not quite as bad as it sounds, however, and it doesn't imperil the financing of the defense program in any way.

Here is how the Treasury got down to its last billion: The public debt passed $44,000,000,000 ten days ago. That means the Treasury can borrow only $1,000,000,000 more for purposes other than national defense. Last summer Congress authorized the Treasury to borrow $4,000,000,000 above the statutory $45,000,000,000 limit on the national debt—but for defense purposes only.

None of that $4,000,000,000 has yet been spent, as the bonds have not been issued. When they are sold, the general fund can be repaid the $500,000,000 which already has been spent for defense since the start of the fiscal year. From then on, apparently, the nation is to operate under a "two-budget" system such as rearmament brought about in European countries.

Inevitably, of course, the next Congress will raise the existing $49,000,000,000 ceiling on combined ordinary and defense public debts. The nation will spend much more than $4,000,000,000 in its national defense program. Whether the limit on the ordinary public debt must be raised materially will depend on Federal fiscal policies henceforth.

of them underwent any training nor has either of them had any experience of a kind to qualify him as an officer of the army. At the time of the passage of the Conscription Act, Mrs. Roosevelt wrote that young men like her sons should be among the very first to be called out for service. That seemed very noble and democratic, indeed, but it does not quite fit in with these easily secured commissions, obtained for the asking and without going through the months of training in the officers' training camps which are required of the ordinary young man who wants to be an officer.

IT would be unjust, of course, to suggest that Elliott secured his captaincy in order to avoid the draft. Nevertheless the fact remains that he and his brother have now become exempt from the draft. They have become officers without the time, trouble and toil to fit themselves for officers required of other young men of their age. Under the circumstances, it is perhaps natural that there should be a certain amount of resentment among thousands of young men soon to be drafted as privates at the thought of the Roosevelt boys becoming officers without going through the officers' training period—merely because they wanted to be officers. Every drafted boy, of course, would like to be a captain if he could, but how many of them can become captains with the ease, celerity and grace of the Roosevelt boys? The answer, of course, is none—not one.

CONSIDERING these things, it might have been better if Capt. Elliott Roosevelt, who is just 30 years old, had refrained from making quite so unctuous and patronizing a statement as he did upon the receipt of his commission. "No matter what the sacrifice," he told newspapermen, "it is important for all young people to join up and take part in the defense program." Considering these things, it does seem that Capt.

WENDELL WILLKIE Says:

"We still hold firmly to the principle that those whom private enterprise cannot support must be supported by a government agency."

Jobs vs. Relief

ported by a government agency. But I want to ask anyone on relief whether the support the government gives him is enough. Is it enough for the free and able-bodied American to be given a few scraps of cash or credit with which to keep himself and his children just this side of starvation and nakedness? Is that what the Forgotten Man wanted us to remember? "What that man wanted us to remember was his chance—and his right to take part in our great American adventure."

Elliott Roosevelt would have a better right (certainly it would have been in better taste) to tell the "young people" of the country what they ought to do to aid defense if he either had waited for the draft or gone into an officers' training camp like other "young people" have to do when they want to become officers.

THE implication of Captain Roosevelt's statement to the press is that "all young people" should follow his example. Aside from the fact that you cannot get commissions the way he got his unless you have White House influence, this was insufferably smug. It is not surprising that there should be irritation among the members of the American Legion, the prospective draftees and their families.

HULMEVILLE

"CUPID RIDES A BUS"

by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER XV

They broke apart, staring at each other with new eyes.

"Gosh!" said Tony Taylor reverently. "Oh—my gosh!" And made as if to seize her with osculatory intent again.

Ginger came to earth with a thud. She blinked, then smacked his face hard.

"How dared you!" she spat out. Tony's arms froze in mid-air; his hand then instinctively sought his stinging face. Before he could say anything more, she turned and fled up the path to the house on the highway. He followed her, more slowly, chagrined yet oddly delighted.

They entered the dining-room silently, and sat down to dinner. The room was empty, except for the proprietor who was also acting as waiter. When the latter disappeared into the kitchen, Tony spoke.

"Boy, you pack a wallop, woman!"

Ginger kept her eyes on her plate.

"I'm sorry, Tony. It was my fault, I guess."

He rubbed his cheek, and grinned.

"Being sorry doesn't straighten out my jawbone!" he chuckled.

"Imagine having a sparring-partner for a wife!"

"You won't have anybody for a wife after tomorrow," said Ginger shortly.

"Didn't know I had one, now," said Tony.

She said nothing else, and they ate their dinner in silence. At its end, as they lingered over coffee, he offered her a cigarette, and she accepted it. Just then the proprietor turned on a radio, behind the counter. As he fiddled with the dials, they heard snatches of a familiar radio voice.

"It's Sunday night," Ginger suddenly remembered. "That must be Walter Winchell—tune him in, won't you?"

"Sure," said Tony, agreeably, anxious to make peace.

Winchell's gossip of Hollywood and Broadway suddenly filled the little room, and they listened as many millions of others were listening elsewhere. Tony stole a glance at Ginger. Her eyes were resolutely on the radio. Suddenly the mention of his name froze Tony in his seat.

"FLASH!—Anthony Taylor, junior—son of the traction king—is honeymooning in a Fifth Avenue bus somewhere on the road to Florida!"

Ginger and Tony looked at each other, stunned.

Winchell went on:

"Young Taylor, who was expelled from Yale last week for the third and last time, married Ginger Drake, a night club lassie, in a little Carolina town yesterday, rather than face arrest and conviction on a charge of breaking the Mann Act with Miss Drake—which was offered him as an alternative."

The radio commentator paused, for an infinitesimal second, while Mrs. Anthony Taylor, frozen, stared at the man whose name she bore, then he concluded: "Betting on Broadway and in New Haven is ten to one the scandal will cost Tony his father's street railway millions!"

Ginger gasped. Tony swore. She rose to her feet, white as a sheet, as Tony hurriedly reached over and cut off the radio. They stared at each other.

Ginger spoke first.

"How on earth did he—who could—"

"Your crooner friend!" he told her bitterly. "The dirty so-and-so kept his word!"

"What word?"

"His threat on the telephone—"

Tony caught himself, then shrugged his shoulders, and told her the whole story. Ginger listened, white-faced.

"And it's the truth—then? About your father?" She gulped. "I thought you said he worked for the trolley company!"

"He does," said Tony. "Only he isn't a motorman any more. He's president."

"Then you're really—rich—a millionaire's son?"

"So what?" he wanted to know, irritably. He was busy thinking of things he'd like to do to Ronny Rockaby.

Ginger reddened, remembering various remarks she had made to Tony—her admission that she liked luxuries, meant to marry a millionaire some day. And here she had been married to one, all the time!

But suddenly another thought struck her so distressing as to overshadow her shame.

"Your father will blame you, won't he? He'll disinherit you—like Winchell said!"

"He's most likely done it already," said Tony, cynically. "He's been threatening to ever since I got thrown out of college the first time."

"That'll finish you!" she exclaimed. "And it's all my fault. You did it to help me get to Miami!"

"Forget it," said Tony. "I guess I've had it coming, after making an ass of myself in school. I'm only sorry about the rotten publicity."

"But neither of us—nothing wrong happened!"

"Try and make anybody believe that, now." He shrugged his shoulders. "Well, the publicity ought to do you some good, at least—it'll cinch you a job."

Tears stung her eyes.

"Do you think I want a job—that way?"

"A job's a job. Anyway, a career's what you want isn't it? Didn't you want to be famous—successful—and land yourself a millionaire?"

He laughed shortly. "You've only landed a pauper so far—but still, you always did intend to throw him back into the sea!"

Ginger bit her lip.

"I'm not going to marry anybody—ever again!" said she, in an odd voice. "You were right, Tony. You don't have to be rich to be happy. A person should make his own way—work for his happiness."

Tony gave her a peculiar look, as if seeing her for the first time. He had been giving her similar looks ever since they had come in to dinner, following that kiss in the garden.

"Maybe I've been wrong," said Tony. "Suppose a guy falls in love and wants to give his girl things? Cars, and clothes, and trips abroad, and—and the moon—if she wants it?" He stared into space as if discovering a great truth. "You can't do that by sharing the wealth!"

"A couple can share romance—and life—" she pointed out, passionately. "They don't need money!"

"You can't buy milk coats and snappy roadsters just with romance," said Tony, sagely. Love had come to him suddenly—so suddenly, that it had completely reversed his outlook on life. He was still rather dazed by the swift change.

"You don't need milk coats and expensive cars to be happy!" Ginger pointed out. With the discovery of Tony's identity as a rich man's son, had come a deep-abiding shame for the things she had been saying the past few days. Partly because of this, and partly because she instinctively was against anything Tony was for, she, too, had simultaneously undergone a mental about-face.

Tony stared at her, and his face showed a sudden growing delight....

"Do you mean—that maybe you won't want a divorce, after all?"

She stared at him, shocked into silence by his words and their implications.

"That kiss—" he rushed on, "did you mean it—when you kissed me that way? Or didn't you?"

Ginger sat horrified; for in that moment she allowed herself to realize that she had meant that kiss—and there was no denying what that meant. However, there was her pride. Tony had called her a gold digger. If she admitted she loved him, now, he would think it was because she had discovered his father was a millionaire; she could never hope to convince him of the truth. Her earlier statements were boomeranging on her, smashing her sudden new hopes to bits!

She steeled herself.

"A kiss is only a handshake, on Broadway," she told him, a bit unsteadily. And abruptly turned the subject. "Where's your father now?"

His face fell.

"In Palm Beach, now. Why?"

"Why don't you go to him and tell him the whole truth? I'll back you up."

"That's out," said Tony, flatly. "I've made my bed—and it's yours truly's exclusively!"

"Then if you won't—I will!" she declared. "You married me to get me out of a hole. I can't do less than explain it all—"

"You'll do nothing of the kind! I'll handle my own affairs, thank you!" He was hurt, at her rebuff, and showed it. "We'd better get on the road if we want to make Miami in time, tomorrow."

Township Group Pleased With Reading System

Teachers in Bristol Township school are most enthusiastic over this system which was started this year in the district.

Mr. Boehm, who was introduced by Carl Vetter, who presided in the absence of president William Vetter, allotted time to a question period. He also advised that the children in these lower grades be in bed earlier, eight o'clock or 8.30 at the latest. "They need plenty of rest," he urged. Another thing dwelt upon was appreciation on the part of the girls and boys.

"Children appreciate things if they have a part in making of them. Where things are frequently given to them outright they lack appreciation of those gifts."

The method of report card markings is not based on specific marks received at times, but on ability of the child to do things, with willingness and aptitude being considered. The new systems were started in Bristol Township schools this term.

At the opening of the session, Mrs. Margaret Rouzer led in the flag salute, with Mrs. Morris Dayhoff reading the Scripture lesson. All joined in singing of "God Bless America."

Motion pictures shown by Norman Bertelette of the Philadelphia Electric Company included "Trans-Pacific," and an organologue "Singing Sam."

A card party is planned for the evening of October 25th at the school house. Refreshments were served by Mrs. George Bailey, Mrs. Kelly, and Mrs. Dayhoff.

Three air raid alarms sounded in the city while defenders of the Capital sent up a terrific barrage of ground fire and scores of British fighters leaped on the attacking raiders.

In contrast to the heavy German losses, an official announcement stated only two British fighting planes were lost and the pilot of one of these was declared safe.

The trio included two Bristol High School boys, Harry Riebel and Linton Martin; and John Welsh, of Croydon. Vice-president Dr. John J. Hargrave was in charge of the meeting. Club singing was led by Ernest Gamble, assisted by E. Leslie Helwig at the piano.

Riebel told of the preparations he made in leaving for camp, of the equipment he received when he arrived there. The main object of the camp was to show the visitors what scouting stood for. The Scouts' duties included gate duty, or counting visitors, guarding exhibits, and being subject to call at any building. The telephone building and exhibit was the most interesting to Riebel.

Linton Martin, the second scout from Bristol, told of the retreat in which the Army, Navy and Marines participated. He was on stick duty at this time and had a very good view of the complete maneuvers. Stick duty is keeping the crowds back of the ropes. The General Motors exhibit and the General Electric exhibit appealed most to Martin.

Welsh, the third of the scouts to speak, was very much interested in the night fountain display and in the Kodak exhibit. His duties at the Fair included guard duty at the British Building which houses a very valuable stamp collection and war relics.

Next week the local Rotary Club will be visited by the District Governor on his official visit.

John Hinchman Featured
At New Hope For October

The October exhibition of the New Hope Art Associates opens on Tuesday, October 1st, with John H. Hinchman featured as artist of the month. Mr. Hinchman belongs to the local group of abstractionists and is the first of these to be featured at the gallery.

Born in Detroit in 1884, he grew up in the Middle West and first went to art school at night while working in his father's wholesale drug business during the daytime hours. After a thorough groundwork obtained at the School of Fine Arts in Detroit, John Hinchman went to Europe for four years to study painting under some of the foremost teachers abroad. Returning to America, he went to live in California where he continued painting and where his works were widely exhibited. Finally, settling in New Hope, Mr. Hinchman joined the colony of Bucks county artists. For the last two years he has devoted his talents to pure abstractions. His work is strong and compelling and reveals an interest in creative rather than academic interpretation.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Whether shall we go from Thy Spirit? Or whether shall we flee from Thy presence? O God, Thou art inescapable. Blessed are we if we can draw a straight line from the leaves of bread on our dinner tables to the heart of our Heavenly Father. Teach us the fine art of seeing God in the life of the world about us. Amen.

The New Hope Art Associates has admitted its first new member since the founding of the gallery last December. This young artist is John Sharp, whose work shows unusual talent and originality. Born in Galesburg, Ill., he attended the University of Iowa. His background is rich with varied experiences in all types of artistic endeavor. He has learned the techniques of oil, water color and ceramics, and has studied at the National Academy and at the Art Students' League. Besides doing portraits of prominent theatrical people including such celebrities as Alla Nazimova and Eugene Loring, Mr. Sharp is working on his second post office mural for the Rockwell City, Iowa, post office. He is represented in the Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., collection and has exhibited at the Corcoran Gallery, the National Gallery at Ottawa, Canada, the Detroit Museum and the Pennsylvania Academy. Hereafter, Mr. Sharp will exhibit each month at the New Hope Art Gallery. His work will be of special interest to visitors who have enjoyed the monthly exhibitions of the original membership group. As usual, in addition to work by the featured artist of the month, canvases by all artists-members will be on exhibition during October.

The Phillips Mill Fall Exhibition will open on September 28th and will run through October 27th. The mill will be open daily from one to six home this evening.

p. m., and on Sundays from 10 a. m. to six p. m. Tea will be served every afternoon except Sundays.

BILL DOUGHERTY GLOOMY OVER HIS JENKINTOWN ELEVEN

In the Three Scrimmages Held Thus Far, Team Seems To Be at Loss on Gridiron

OPENS SEASON FRIDAY

Game To Be Played With Souderton Under New
Lighting System

JENKINTOWN, Sept. 27.—Bill Dougherty, football mentor at Jenkintown High School has more reason than ever this year to be called gloomy. In the three practice scrimmages to date the Red and Blue seem to be at a loss on the gridiron. Blocking on the offensive has been very weak and the tackling on the defense has been unbearable. The backfield candidates—Bob Murphy, Albert Hall, Wally McCalla, and George Rossiter lack experience and speed. Therefore the only hope for scoring power is through deceptive channels. On paper the first string line of Hopson and Walton, ends; Yetter and Hedler, tackles; Abbott and Balzoret, guards; and Baker, center, seems to be a very fine combination of forward wall material. However, to date this group stops about one out of five plays. Consequently the scrimmages with opponents such as Jenkintown has had to face has been far superior to anything the Drakes could field.

The Souderton Indians will inaugurate the new lighting system at Jenkintown tonight. Last year Souderton upset Jenkintown with a 97 yard run three seconds before the final whistle, the attempted placement coming after the game was over. The final score was 6-0. James Heslop, coach at Souderton will have a green but heavy team and when they visit the lair of the Drakes this evening, the battle is bound to be a torrid one. The attack of both clubs will be a blitzkrieg of aerials as neither has shown good ground work to date. Souderton with one scheduled game under its belt will have a slight advantage as game experience develops players much faster than practice scrimmages.

An one enters the Jenkintown dress in, too, a huge sign may be observed which reads: "Revenge is sweet—Remember 1939." A picture showing an angry drake chasing an Indian can be seen, also. Gloomy Bill Dougherty's idea of psychology seems to be a bit on the humorous side as it seems to the writer that only a miracle will enable Jenkintown to emerge victorious in the Buxmont league race this year. It is rumored that if the Drakes defeat Souderton, the sign with the score upon it will be hung on the dressing room walls for the remainder of the season. Each week will see a different sign and slogan for the Old York Road boys. If they can hang up four signs this season, it will be the last of the three P's that will turn the trick—not the passing nor the punting, but the praying will accomplish the victory.

The following week will find the Drakes at Ambler, two time champions of the Bux Mont League.

WILSON BOWLERS LEAD IN BOWLING SCORES

Going into the second week of bowling the National League rolled some of the best scores of the year thus far. Wilson's led the league last night with 2453, followed closely by the P. P. Co. and Coffey's who bowled 2425 and 2411 respectively.

Mike Kondyra led the Wilson boys with a fine 571 and Del Lynn turned a 579 for the two best scores of the night. Kiott Light led the paper-makers with 555 as McDevitt took honors for the Coffey team with 553. Joe Amisson really came true in fine form last night leading the Ford boys with 559. George Bowman, Kemp, Boccardo and Bob Blake also were high.

STRONG BACKFIELD LOOKS TO MIDDLE OF NEW TRENTON LINE

First Nocturnal Contest In The Local Team's History
Carded for Tonight

AT DUNN FIELD

Both Teams To Enter The Fray Confident of Victory

A quartet of expected backfield starters, Clem Peterpaul, Tony "Chick" DiAngelo, Pete Spezzano and Tom Galzerano might receive the nod from Head Coach Tom Campion tonight at Dunn Field, Trenton, as the Bristol High School Bunnies open their grid season against Trenton Catholic in a night fray. This set of backs, with the possible inclusion of Bob Barouth, is the hope, pride and joy of every Cardinal rooter these days as an optimistic 1940 outlook gleams on the gridiron horizon.

As usual, almost anything can be expected this evening under the starlit skies as the twenty-two men of both institutions line-up for battle. High School football is a hard to judge sport during the early part of the season, and new men who have replaced old ones either live up to expected standards or slip into mediocrity.

Should they develop, a season of success might perhaps ensue. Should they falter, the entire year might be one of disappointment. And little does one know how these new men will perform under the heat of battle.

For that reason, both teams will go into this opening fray even tonight. Bristol's fleet set of pony backs, confidently awaiting the kickoff, know that much of their success depends upon the new men up front. Reputedly green in the middle of the line, all eyes will be focused on this spot. In addition, two new wings will be out for the first time in varsity action, replacing the former old reliables, Joe Pica and Steve Florito.

A vast assemblage of Bristol fans are expected to make the trip to Trenton. All other conference teams are scheduled for Saturday tussles with Bensalem, league darkhorse, opening at Upper Merion and Langhorne meeting Mt. Holly. Morrisville plays Trenton High on the same Dunn Field and under the same arc lights Saturday night.

Bucks Co. Woman Sentenced; Tots Killed By Her Car.

The plea of the young woman was termed "commendable" by the judge. In view of the possibility of her securing freedom through a trial.

Mrs. Zollikofer denied that an officer on duty at the intersection during school hours had motioned to her to stop. "He was on the other side of the street with his back to me," she testified.

Mrs. Zollikofer faltered as the judge concluded his remarks and passed sentence, and her sister-in-law, Miss Doris Zollikofer, who had been in the car at the time of the accident, helped her to her seat.

The judge stated: "Her pleas show she realizes the seriousness of her act. Society must be protected and people must be made conscious of the danger involved in the reckless conduct of an automobile."

"To allow complete freedom to this woman would be a miscarriage of justice. The consequences of her wrongdoing were so grave that punishment must be meted out. I am not inflicting punishment in any vindictive sense but rather as a caution to all automobile drivers. I therefore sentence her to three months in the county prison."
